

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An imaging apparatus, such as a video camera, is arranged to record a first image signal and a second image signal on a first recording medium and a second recording medium, respectively. While recording on the first recording medium the first image signal subjected to a process corresponding to a first special effect, the imaging apparatus records on the second recording medium the second image signal subjected to a process corresponding to a second special effect different from the first special effect.